Reversal of Fortune

Oil touches $119 overnight, then retreats. Trump signals war nearing completion. S&P erases 1.5% loss to close +0.81%.

THE SESSION

The S&P 500 erased a 1.5% intraday loss to close up 0.81%. Monday opened with oil near $119 per barrel overnight — the highest since mid-2022 — as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Bahrain announced production cuts with Hormuz traffic still frozen. The Dow was down nearly 900 points at the session low. Then President Trump told CBS that the war is "very complete, pretty much" and the military operation is "very far" ahead of its four-to-five week timeline. Oil fell below $90 by the close. Stocks reversed. The Nasdaq finished up 1.38%, the Russell 2000 gained 1.12%, and the VIX fell 13.5% to 25.50.

Semiconductors led the recovery as investors rotated back into growth. Broadcom and AMD each gained over 4.5% on the session. Morgan Stanley noted the U.S. market is likely emerging from its rolling correction as fundamental earnings growth remains resilient. Bitcoin rose 4.47% to $68,921 after Strategy (MSTR) disclosed purchasing nearly 18,000 BTC during last week's sell-off. Gold dipped 0.22% as the safe-haven trade unwound modestly.

The broader picture: this was the S&P's first positive session after its worst week since October. CPI arrives Wednesday, PPI Thursday, and the FOMC meets March 19. The 10-year yield held steady near 4.14%. The market is watching for confirmation that the conflict is winding down — and whether oil settles back toward pre-war levels.

IOWN Tactical: S&P at ~6,794. Still well above our –20% buy trigger (~5,800 from ATH). If Trump's comments lead to an actual ceasefire, the relief rally has significant room to run. Stay the course.

IOWN HOLDINGS: NOTABLE MOVERS

WINNERS

MARA +8.11% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Bitcoin's 4.5% rally lifted crypto miners. Marathon rebounded from Friday's lows as risk appetite returned on ceasefire hopes.

LRCX +5.93% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Lam Research led the semi equipment recovery. The Broadcom earnings tailwind and reduced regulatory fear supported the group.

AMD +5.33% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Reclaimed $202 on the semiconductor rotation. Morgan Stanley's constructive note on growth resilience supported the move.

SUPV +4.10% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Grupo Supervielle bounced on EM risk-on sentiment. Argentine financials benefited from the broader recovery in risk appetite.

HUT +3.55% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Hut 8 recovered modestly from last week's 8.35% decline. Bitcoin miners tracked the BTC rebound but with less leverage than the underlying.

KEYS +3.52% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Keysight rebounded from two sessions of sharp declines. Test equipment demand concerns eased alongside the broader tech recovery.

CAT +3.51% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Caterpillar recovered $24 after falling over $50 in the prior three sessions. Industrial names bounced as oil retreated from peak levels.

GFI +3.35% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Gold Fields gained even as spot gold dipped slightly. The stock had been oversold after a 15%+ decline from its pre-war peak.

DECLINERS

VLO –3.86% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Valero gave back gains as oil's retreat from $119 to $87 compressed the refining margin that had fueled its three-day rally last week.

GPC –3.19% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Genuine Parts declined on broader consumer spending concerns. Friday's weak payrolls data continued to weigh on cyclical names.

ORI –2.25% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Old Republic dipped as financial-sector caution lingered following the BlackRock private-credit withdrawal news from last week.

SSNC –1.83% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

SS&C Technologies pulled back modestly after holding firm through last week's sell-off.

CNX –1.66% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

CNX Resources fell as natural gas names gave back some of the energy rally with oil retreating from overnight highs.

EIX –1.44% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Edison International continued its recent softness. Utilities remain pressured by elevated Treasury yields.
