Pre-NVD A Pause

S&P −0.65% as 10-year touches 16-month high. Growth Portfolio holds green via CRDO +8.14%, MRVL +4.34%. NVDA prints Wednesday.

THE SESSION

The session was a controlled drawdown, not a break. The S&P 500 closed −0.65% at 7,354.96, the Dow off −0.65%, and the Nasdaq −0.83% as the 10-year Treasury yield pushed to a 16-month high near 4.7% and the 30-year touched an 18-year high. The bond move did the work: with oil sticky, inflation expectations rising, and Fed cuts now priced out for the year, the long end is repricing the regime. The tape responded the way it should — lower, but orderly.

The geopolitical lid stayed on. Trump confirmed Monday's postponement of the planned Iran strike at the request of Saudi, Qatari, and UAE leaders, then on Tuesday said the US may strike again but that Tehran wants a deal. Vice President Vance characterized the talks as making "a lot of progress." Crude held its bid, gold gave back −1.56% as the immediate flight-to-safety premium eased, and the VIX ticked to 18.07. None of it pointed to a panic — it pointed to a market waiting on one print.

That print is Wednesday's NVDA. Consensus sits near $78–$79 billion in revenue with data-center the line that matters. Tuesday's selling concentrated in the names that have run hardest — semis broadly heavy, large-cap tech leading the index lower — while defensive sleeves and the AI-power-infrastructure complex held. The Growth Portfolio closed +0.15% against a Nasdaq −0.83% and an IUSG benchmark −0.67%. That is not noise. That is the portfolio working as designed on the day the rest of the tape de-risked into the catalyst.

IOWN Tactical: Carson's active SPY $645.80 support remains untested at roughly 12% below today's close. The drawdown is a yield-driven repricing, not a structural break. Think Like an Owner.

IOWN HOLDINGS: NOTABLE MOVERS

WINNERS

CRDO +8.14% — GROWTH PORTFOLIO

The AI-connectivity name continued its rally to $168.99 as hyperscaler demand for active electrical cables and 800G+ optics positioned the print as a structural pre-NVDA bid. Q4 FY26 guidance had revenue at $425–$435M, above prior consensus.

MRVL +4.34% — GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Marvell at $176.27 caught the same AI-infrastructure bid as CRDO — custom silicon and optical interconnect for hyperscaler data centers reads directly through to the NVDA capex orbit. The semi complex bifurcated: connectivity bid, handset chips heavy.

EIX +3.05% — GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Edison International at $70.53 led the utility bid as the AI-power-infrastructure thesis carried over from Monday's NEE–Dominion announcement. Regulated electric is now the consensus carry for data-center load growth.

CNX +2.22% — GROWTH PORTFOLIO

CNX at $37.37 caught the natural-gas-to-power bid — the same physical-AI thesis that lifted EIX and held NEE flat-positive on a red tape. The Appalachian gas trade and the AI-power trade are converging.

COIN +2.12% — GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Coinbase recovered to $193.45 as the digital-asset complex stabilized after Monday's sharp drawdown. The retail-direct exposure bounced even as the spot ETFs held flat-to-modestly-down.

NEE +1.15% — DIVIDEND STRATEGY

NextEra recovered to $90.06, paring back roughly a quarter of Monday's −4.63% deal-day selloff. The market is digesting the $66.8B Dominion combination as the largest articulation to date of the physical-AI infrastructure supercycle.

DECLINERS

SUPV –6.25% — GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Grupo Supervielle to $7.35 on Argentine bank rotation and political noise rather than fundamentals. The structural Argentina turnaround thesis is unchanged; the daily move is sentiment-driven.

QCOM –3.94% — DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Qualcomm to $195.61 as analyst skepticism on valuation compounded the broader chip sell-off ahead of NVDA. Seaport sustained a Sell rating; the recent five-week rally has cooled, and core handset weakness remains the structural overhang.

HOOD –3.88% — GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Robinhood to $74.16 on the same retail-direct/crypto-adjacent de-risking that hit COIN's peers and the miners. The yield backup and the pre-NVDA risk-off mood weighed disproportionately on retail-trading exposure.

AEM –3.23% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Agnico Eagle to $173.43 as gold fell −1.56% to $4,486.90. The diplomatic pause is bleeding the safety bid out of bullion even as inflation expectations rise — an unusual cross-current the gold position will need to absorb.

FCX –3.02% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Freeport-McMoRan to $58.67 on broader risk-off in industrial metals. Copper and the cyclical complex bore the brunt of the rate move, with rate-sensitive growth and materials leading the decline.

TOL –2.49% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Toll Brothers to $123.81 ahead of after-the-close earnings. Consensus near $2.58 EPS on $2.42B revenue; the luxury housing tape is positioning defensively into the print amid the rate backup.

HOLDINGS NEWS

NEE–Dominion deal context. Tuesday’s NEE bounce confirms the market is reading the $66.8 billion all-stock combination as strategic rather than dilutive on reflection. Dominion held its Monday gains, and analyst desks (RBC, Seeking Alpha, Motley Fool) validated the AI-power-infrastructure logic. Combined entity targets 9%+ EPS CAGR through 2030 and a $138B regulated capital base growing 11% annually. The IOWN dividend sleeve’s largest AI-infrastructure position is now the largest regulated utility in the world.

Toll Brothers prints tonight. Consensus $2.58 EPS, $2.42B revenue — both indicating a roughly 27% year-over-year EPS decline from the luxury-housing tape’s peak. Estimates have drifted down 1.1% in the past 30 days and 9.8% over 90 days. The bar is low; guidance on incentives, backlog, and Pacific-region mix is what will move the after-hours print.

Keysight prints tonight. Consensus near $2.37 EPS. The Keysight read-through to AI-infrastructure test demand and to the broader semi complex matters more on Tuesday than usual given the pre-NVDA setup.

Home Depot pre-market. HD beat with adjusted EPS of $3.43 on $41.77B revenue, comparable sales +0.6%, and reaffirmed full-year guidance. The professional contractor mix held up; affordability pressure on DIY remains. A constructive non-IOWN read on the housing tape ahead of TOL after the bell.
