The Reversal

S&P +1.16% as Trump suspends Iran strikes for five days. Brent whipsaws from $114 to $100. Gold −3.7% in worst week since 1983. Bitcoin +4.5%.

THE SESSION

Markets opened under siege and closed in relief. The S&P 500 gained 1.16% to 6,581.76 after one of the most dramatic intraday reversals of the year, swinging from a pre-market loss of more than 1% to a broad risk-on close. The catalyst was President Trump's announcement that the United States has engaged in diplomatic talks with Iran and will suspend all strikes against Iranian power plants and energy infrastructure for five days. The Dow rose 1.38%, the Nasdaq gained 1.38%, and the Russell 2000 led with a 2.29% advance as small caps caught the sharpest bid on de-escalation hopes.

The reversal was stark. Before the open, S&P 500 futures were trading near 6,489—roughly 1.1% below Friday's close—after a punishing overnight session in Asia. South Korea's Kospi had triggered circuit breakers, falling more than 6%. Japan's Nikkei shed nearly 5%. Brent crude spiked above $114 in early trading, extending its war-era highs. The setup pointed to another leg lower. Then Trump posted to Truth Social that the U.S. and Iran had held "very good and productive conversations" over the prior two days, and the tone shifted instantly. Brent collapsed more than 13% at its lows before settling around $104—still elevated, but a dramatic reversal from the morning's trajectory. The VIX eased to 26.15, down 2.35%.

Iran denied that formal talks were taking place, and the five-day window is narrow. But the market's response was unambiguous: any diplomatic opening, however tenuous, was enough to reprice the tail risk that had dominated sentiment for three weeks. Energy was the only sector to close lower on the day as the crude reversal unwound the war premium that had been building since late February. Cyclicals, industrials, and semiconductors led the advance. Caterpillar rose 3.06%. TSM gained 2.80%. The session confirmed what the portfolio has been positioned for: patience through volatility, not reaction to it.

IOWN Tactical: The morning opened with circuit breakers in Seoul and Brent above $114. The close delivered the broadest risk-on session in three weeks. This is why we are positioned through events, not around them. Avoid Erosion.

IOWN HOLDINGS: NOTABLE MOVERS

WINNERS

HUT +11.55% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Bitcoin's 4.5% rally to $70,884 lifted the digital asset miners. Hut 8 led the portfolio on the session, recovering from last week's selloff as BTC reclaimed the $70,000 level lost over the weekend.

SUPV +9.25% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Argentine bank rallied on continued EM appetite and a broad risk-on rotation into frontier names. Grupo Supervielle remains one of the most volatile holdings but has delivered outsized gains in relief rallies throughout the correction.

GPC +4.86% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Shares jumped after disclosure that Baupost Group—Seth Klarman's fund—increased its stake by 6% in Q4 2025. The institutional endorsement lifted a name that had been under pressure since its Q4 earnings miss.

GFI +4.66% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Gold miners caught a relief bid despite gold declining 3.7% on the session. After gold's worst week since 1983—down more than 10%—forced liquidation appears to be exhausting, and miners are beginning to decouple from spot.

TOL +4.53% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Homebuilder rallied with the broader cyclical bid. KB Home reports Tuesday after the close—the read-through on housing demand under elevated mortgage rates will be closely watched.

KEYS +4.12% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Keysight extended its post-earnings momentum. Citi raised its price target to $320 on March 19. The company's AI inference emulation and 1.6T Ethernet validation platforms continue to position it at the center of data center infrastructure spending.

DECLINERS

FINV –6.93% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Chinese fintech name declined on continued weakness in China-linked equities. FINV has been the most volatile position in the growth sleeve, reflecting both regulatory overhang and macro sensitivity to U.S.-China dynamics.

ATAT –2.55% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Latin American telecom pulled back after recent strength. Atento remains thinly traded and subject to outsized daily moves on modest volume.

LMT –1.78% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Defense names sold off as the de-escalation trade unwound the war premium that had supported the sector. Lockheed gave back Friday's gains as the market priced in a narrowing probability of expanded military operations.

QCOM –1.19% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Qualcomm declined despite the broader semi rally. The stock is down 28% from its highs as mobile demand concerns persist alongside AI-driven rotation into higher-growth semi names.

VLO –1.03% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Refiner pulled back as crude's intraday collapse from $114 to $100 compressed the crack spread that had been supporting margins. VLO remains up significantly since the war began.

HOLDINGS NEWS

GPC — Baupost Group increases stake. Seth Klarman's Baupost Group disclosed a 6% increase to its Genuine Parts position in Q4 2025, bringing its total holdings to approximately 1.49 million shares valued at $183 million. The position represents 3.5% of the fund's portfolio. GPC has been under pressure since its Q4 earnings miss and weak FY26 guidance, but Klarman's continued accumulation signals institutional conviction at current valuations.

KEYS — Citi raises price target to $320. Citi lifted its target from $282 on March 19, citing sustained order strength following Keysight's Q1 earnings beat in February. BofA also upgraded the stock post-earnings, calling the order inflection "here to stay." The company has launched a series of AI and cloud-focused products in March, including its 1.6T Ethernet validation platform and AI inference emulation suite.

CAT — Oppenheimer notes energy transition tailwind. Oppenheimer highlighted Caterpillar as a beneficiary of the energy infrastructure buildout accelerated by the Middle East conflict. CAT rose 3.06% on the session and was among the Dow's top performers.
