Growth Sleeve Roars

Crude cracks below $100. Yields cool. Growth Portfolio +2.77% vs. IUSG +1.34% as AMD, CRDO, TOL, LRCX, and VST lead into Nvidia's after-close print.

THE SESSION

The three-day pullback broke decisively. The S&P 500 ETF closed at $741.26, up 1.03%, with the Nasdaq adding 1.54% and the Russell 2000 leading at +2.56%. The proximate catalysts were two: crude broke below $100 a barrel for the first time in weeks after President Trump told reporters the United States is in the "final stages" of negotiations with Iran, with Brent down 5.63% to $105.02 and WTI down 5.66% to $98.26; and the long-end Treasury sell-off paused, with yields stepping back from levels not seen in almost two decades.

The FOMC minutes from the April 28–29 meeting — Kevin Warsh's first as Chair — landed at midday and confirmed the hawkish tilt the rate market had already priced. Policymakers indicated they are prepared to move away from the current easing bias if inflation remains persistently above the 2% target. The tape absorbed the message and kept moving higher anyway, a reminder that the AI capex and earnings narrative continues to set the agenda when geopolitical and rate fears recede even briefly.

All eyes now turn to Nvidia's fiscal Q1 2027 report after tonight's close. Options markets are pricing a roughly 5.5% move in either direction, equivalent to about $355 billion of market capitalization — larger than 90% of the companies in the S&P 500. The IOWN positioning ran into the print across multiple layers of the physical-AI stack: AMD +8.10% in the compute layer, CRDO +8.28% and MRVL +5.97% in connectivity, LRCX +6.84% in equipment, TSM +2.29% in foundry, and VST +6.90% in power. The Growth Portfolio finished +2.77%, beating IUSG (+1.34%) by 143 basis points on the session.

IOWN Tactical: a 1% up-day on the index masks the meaningful internal — the Growth sleeve doubled the benchmark's gain because the positioning is spread across the layers the AI buildout requires, not concentrated in the headline name. Ownership conviction shows up on days like this.

IOWN HOLDINGS: NOTABLE MOVERS

WINNERS

TOL +9.80% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Continued the rip from yesterday's after-hours print — Q2 EPS of $2.72 beat consensus near $2.59, deliveries of 2,491 homes generated $2.51 billion in home-sales revenue, and management raised full-year homebuilding guidance across the key metrics. Closed at $136.31.

CRDO +8.28% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Extended Tuesday's run as the AI-infrastructure connectivity tape firmed into the Nvidia print. Closed at $182.98 — the largest single-day percentage gain among IOWN growth holdings outside TOL.

AMD +8.10% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $447.58 ahead of Nvidia's after-the-close report. Per Robinhood pricing, the session high of $449.39 sat just below the 52-week high of $469.22. The AI compute layer ran hard.

VST +6.90% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Vistra extended the AI-power bid, closing at $144.00. The utility and merchant-power layer of the physical-AI stack continues to attract capital alongside the chip names.

LRCX +6.84% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Lam Research closed at $292.09 as analyst sentiment around AI-related wafer-fab equipment spending stayed firmly constructive — B. Riley recently raised its target to $385 citing accelerating hyperscaler and neo-cloud capex through 2028. The dividend sleeve's exposure to the AI capex cycle resolved cleanly into the broader rally.

MRVL +5.97% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Marvell closed at $186.80 as the connectivity bid extended through the session. Per Motley Fool coverage, MRVL was specifically called out alongside Nvidia as a sector leader heading into the print.

SUPV +5.99% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Grupo Supervielle closed at $7.79 on broad emerging-markets risk appetite as the dollar eased.

MARA +5.71% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Crypto-mining exposure firmed as Bitcoin moved back above $77,000 and the digital-asset complex stabilized.

NXPI +5.39% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

NXP closed at $310.15 in sympathy with the broader semiconductor bid. The automotive and industrial semi name participated fully in the rate-relief rally.

FCX +3.70% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Freeport-McMoRan closed at $60.87. Per Yahoo coverage, hard-asset stocks have been flagged as a positioning trade with the 30-year Treasury yield crossing 5%.

SYF +3.83% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Synchrony closed at $72.05 as consumer credit names benefited from the rate pause.

QCOM +3.55% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Qualcomm rose to $202.55 on the semiconductor rally; Yahoo flagged Intel's surge as evidence of a chip-sector rally reigniting.

HUT +3.43% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Hut 8 closed at $96.51 alongside the broader digital-asset rebound.

HRMY +3.09% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Harmony Bio rose to $31.38 on biotech strength.

AEM +2.74% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Agnico Eagle recovered to $178.15 after Tuesday's sharp drop on the precious-metals selloff — gold firmed +0.83% and the miner participated.

TEL +2.71% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

TE Connectivity rose to $201.39 on the broad cyclical and industrial bid.

GPC +2.70% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Genuine Parts climbed to $94.97 on the consumer-cyclical rebound.

TSM +2.29% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Taiwan Semi closed at $401.62 as the foundry layer of the physical-AI stack rallied alongside the connectivity and compute names.

STLD +2.21% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Steel Dynamics rose to $228.30 on the broad cyclical bid.

HOOD +2.16% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Robinhood closed at $75.76 as risk appetite returned and retail-trading exposure benefited.

PCAR +2.07% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Paccar rose to $111.64 as transports rallied on the crude-oil relief — lower diesel costs flow directly to the truck-manufacturer margin.

DGX +1.76% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Quest Diagnostics rose to $193.75 on defensive demand and constructive analyst commentary.

CAT +1.44% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Caterpillar closed at $872.56. Per Jim Cramer coverage, CAT continues to be characterized as "integral to data center construction" — a theme that resonates with the IOWN physical-AI framework.

SSNC +1.43% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

SS&C closed at $67.20 on the broad large-cap bid.

NVDA +1.30% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Nvidia rose to $223.47 ahead of its after-the-close fiscal Q1 2027 print — the single highest-variance event of the week.

ETHA +1.32% DIGITAL ASSET ETF

Ethereum ETF closed at $16.14, a measured recovery from the recent slide.

SYK +1.18% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Stryker rose to $321.49 on the healthcare bid.

IBIT +1.13% DIGITAL ASSET ETF

Bitcoin ETF closed at $43.99 with Bitcoin holding above $77,000 — a constructive stabilization following the prior week's pressure.

DECLINERS

ADI –3.92% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Analog Devices fell to $398.05 despite a clean beat — Q2 EPS of $3.09 versus consensus near $2.90, revenue of $3.62 billion versus $3.51 billion expected, and a raised Q3 outlook for $3.15–$3.45 EPS and $3.8–$4.0 billion in revenue. Per Seeking Alpha, the sell-off reflected stretched valuation heading into the print — ADI had outpaced the broad market by roughly 50 percentage points year-to-date before today.

VLO –3.37% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Valero gave back $8.85 to $253.77 as refining margins compressed alongside the crude crack.

OKE –3.24% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

ONEOK fell to $92.15 as midstream names tracked the energy complex lower.

CVX –3.00% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Chevron eased to $191.33 in line with the broader integrated-oil pullback on the Trump "final stages" commentary.

DVN –2.48% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Devon Energy closed at $48.46 as upstream producers absorbed the crude move.

CNX –2.25% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

CNX Resources fell to $36.53; natural-gas exposure tracked the broader energy weakness.

NTR –2.07% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Nutrien closed at $70.11 as fertilizer names softened.

NEE –1.99% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

NextEra eased to $88.27 even as the AI-power theme drove VST higher — the utility's recent Dominion deal coverage continues to set the longer-term frame.

EIX –1.33% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Edison International closed at $69.74 as utility breadth was uneven.

COIN –1.12% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Coinbase eased to $191.29 despite the broader digital-asset firming.

ATO –0.97% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Atmos Energy fell to $176.00 on the rate-sensitive utility sleeve.

LMT –0.77% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Lockheed Martin eased to $522.59 as defense gave back into the de-escalation tone — consistent with the orthogonal-hedge role the sleeve plays.

KEYS –0.59% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Keysight closed at $342.08 in a quiet pullback after Tuesday's record-quarter print; the underlying order strength remains a constructive read.

ABT –0.50% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Abbott closed at $88.38.

HOLDINGS NEWS

ADI — Record Q2, raised outlook, sold off anyway. Per the company's release and Investing.com's transcript coverage, Analog Devices reported record fiscal second-quarter revenue of $3.62 billion (+37% year-over-year), net income of $1.18 billion, and adjusted EPS of $3.09 — all above the high end of guidance. The Q3 outlook of $3.15–$3.45 EPS on $3.8–$4.0 billion in revenue exceeded Wall Street expectations. Per Seeking Alpha, the stock still fell roughly 6% on valuation concerns — ADI had run hard into the print. The Empower Semiconductor acquisition announced May 19 expands the company's high-density power portfolio for the AI era and remains the strategic narrative.

TOL — Beat, raised, kept running. After Tuesday's post-close beat (EPS $2.72 vs. $2.59 consensus, revenue $2.53 billion, full-year guidance raised), Toll Brothers extended the move during today's session to close +9.80% at $136.31. Per the company's release, Q2 deliveries were 2,491 homes, net signed contracts hit $2.81 billion on 2,834 homes, and backlog stood at $6.32 billion. Q3 guidance projects average home price between $965,000 and $985,000. The luxury-buyer cohort continues to absorb the rate environment that has pressured the broader homebuilder complex.
