Two Tapes

S&P 500 closes at record 7,230. Nasdaq tops 25,000. Stryker −6.47% on cyber-miss fallout drags Dividend −0.83%; Growth eases −0.20% as energy and materials soften.

THE SESSION

The index made new highs, and our sleeves did not come along. The S&P 500 advanced 0.29% to a record 7,230.12 and the Nasdaq Composite jumped 0.89% to 25,114.44, also a record close, as Apple's 3% post-earnings move and a continued AI-infrastructure bid carried mega-cap tech back to the front of the tape. The Dow slipped 0.31% to 49,499.27 with Chevron's 1.39% decline and a soft industrial complex pulling the blue-chip average lower. The Russell 2000 added 0.46% to close at 2,812.82, just below its 52-week high.

Underneath the headline, the day's mechanics were not friendly to our positioning. Yesterday's broadening rally rotated capital into industrials and small-caps; today the rotation reversed, with leadership returning to the names we deliberately do not concentrate in. The ISM Manufacturing PMI held at 52.7 in line with March, but Prices Paid surged 6.3 points to 84.6, the highest reading since April 2022, and the Employment subindex slipped to 46.4 — the weakest of the year. The combination is a stagflationary print that will keep the rate-path debate live into the May 15 chair transition.

Crude pulled back as Iran reportedly responded to the latest U.S. ceasefire amendments through Pakistani mediators, though Brent held above $111 and the Strait of Hormuz remains effectively closed. The pullback hit the IOWN energy sleeve broadly — CVX −1.39%, OKE −2.27%, VLO −2.26%, CNX −2.65%. Bitcoin advanced 2.43% to $78,163, taking the digital-asset sleeve sharply higher. Gold eased 0.14% to $4,623; the VIX held at 16.98, a level that does not indicate stress despite the dispersion under the surface.

IOWN Tactical: When the index makes a record print and the dividend sleeve trails by 112 basis points, the question is always — what did we own that the index did not? Today the answer is Stryker, where a single cyber-incident-driven Q1 miss accounted for the bulk of the relative drag. The earnings call confirmed full-year guidance and the M&A pipeline; the operational disruption is contained to one quarter. We hold.

IOWN HOLDINGS: NOTABLE MOVERS

WINNERS

CRDO +5.96% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $184.38 as the silicon-photonics narrative continued to build behind the proposed DustPhotonics acquisition and the Robin 800G optical DSP rollout. The AI-infrastructure-physical-buildout thesis remains the cleanest growth-sleeve link to the Mag7 capex commitments above $650B for 2026.

IBIT +2.65% DIGITAL ASSET ETF

Closed at $44.47 as Bitcoin advanced 2.43% to $78,163 on a combination of dollar weakness and renewed dovish positioning despite the hawkish ISM Prices Paid print. The digital-asset sleeve is the clearest beneficiary of the rates-versus-inflation crosswind.

FTNT +2.35% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $86.29 with the cybersecurity bid amplified by today's direct read-across from the SYK cyber-incident disclosure — an Iran-attributed attack that disrupted operations through April. Enterprise security spending is the natural offset to the geopolitical risk premium.

CL +2.23% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Closed at $87.26 after Q1 organic sales growth accelerated to 3.3% from Q4's 2.2%, with revenue of $5.32B beating the $5.22B consensus and adjusted EPS of $0.97 versus $0.95 expected. Volume grew 1.1% companywide with pricing contributing 2.2%; management held full-year guidance. CEO Wallace cited 'broad-based top and bottom-line growth.'

ETHA +1.99% DIGITAL ASSET ETF

Closed at $17.42 in lockstep with the broader crypto bid. The Ether ETF's outperformance versus equities on an inflation-print day reinforces the sleeve's portfolio role as a non-correlated risk asset.

COIN +1.85% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $191.25 on the crypto-equity bid. Coinbase carries the highest beta to digital-asset volume of the IOWN growth sleeve and tracked the IBIT/ETHA move predictably.

AMD +1.71% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $360.54 on the broad semiconductor bid, with the Mag7 capex commitments providing structural demand visibility through 2027. Most-active stock in the S&P 500 today per ChartMill.

HUT +1.58% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $76.98 following the prior session's 6.73% rally on the closing of $3.25B in investment-grade senior secured notes for the River Bend Data Center. The institutional-debt absorption validates the financing path for AI-power-adjacent crypto operators.

ADP +1.07% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Closed at $214.21 with the steady cash-flow employer-services profile catching a bid as a defensive offset to the day's industrial weakness.

DECLINERS

SYK –6.47% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Closed at $294.73 as analysts cut estimates following last night's Q1 miss — revenue of $6.02B versus $6.34B expected, adjusted EPS of $2.60 versus $2.98. The miss was attributed to an Iran-backed cyber incident that disrupted operations through early April; management held full-year EPS guidance of $14.90–$15.10 and reiterated the M&A pipeline strength. Today's move clears most of the operational uncertainty into the price.

MARA –4.42% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $11.46 in profit-taking after the prior session's 11.85% rally. The miner's sleeve role is intentional volatility against the steadier IBIT/ETHA core.

CNX –2.65% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $37.88 as natural-gas equities sold off into the Iran-de-escalation read, despite UNG's recent strength on LNG arbitrage premium. The CNX position remains levered to Appalachian gas takeaway capacity.

AEM –2.47% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $183.56 as gold eased 0.14% to $4,623. The miner sold off in line with the metal as the dollar firmed against the day's risk-on tape.

PCAR –2.29% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Closed at $116.08 in the broader heavy-truck pullback, giving back part of the post-CAT-print rally. The Class 8 cycle remains the structural read-through.

VLO –2.26% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Closed at $246.87 as refining names softened on the crude pullback. VLO's clean Q1 print last week ($4.22 versus $3.18 expected) on refining-margin strength remains the underlying thesis; today is profit-taking.

OKE –2.27% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $90.36 as midstream names tracked the energy complex lower.

FCX –2.13% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Closed at $56.55 on copper and broader-materials weakness against the dollar bid.

GPC –2.09% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Closed at $104.99 in a giveback after Wednesday's 3.82% advance on the CAT industrial-cycle read-across.

TEL –2.00% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Closed at $207.43 in the broader connector and industrial-tech complex pullback.

HOLDINGS NEWS

SYK Q1 cyber-incident dispersion clarified. The Stryker earnings call last night confirmed an Iran-backed cyber attack disrupted operations from early March through early April, with the operational shutdown driving organic sales growth to just 2.4% for the quarter and adjusted EPS down 8.5% year-on-year. Adjusted gross margin contracted 190 basis points; operating margin compressed 180 basis points. Management held full-year guidance of 8.0–9.5% organic growth and adjusted EPS of $14.90–$15.10, citing 'distortions that will normalize over the course of the year.' CEO Lobo confirmed the M&A pipeline remains active with net debt to EBITDA at 2.1x. BTIG kept its Buy rating; consensus 12-month target sits at $420 versus today's $294.73 close.

CVX Q1: massive EPS beat, mixed reception. Chevron reported adjusted EPS of $1.41 versus $0.97 consensus — the largest earnings beat since October 2020 — on revenue of $48.61B versus a higher $51.39B compiled estimate. Reported net income fell 36% to $2.2B due to roughly $2.9B in unfavorable timing effects on financial hedges and a $360M legal reserve. Adjusted free cash flow reached $4.1B; the company returned $6.0B to shareholders in the quarter ($3.5B dividends, $2.5B buybacks). Worldwide oil production rose 23.7% year-on-year on Hess integration and Permian/Gulf of America growth. Wirth: 'Despite heightened geopolitical volatility... Chevron delivered solid first quarter performance.' Stock closed −1.39% at $190.63 as the timing-effect noise overshadowed the headline beat.

CL Q1: clean acceleration, full-year guide held. Colgate-Palmolive reported Q1 net sales of $5.32B (+8.4% year-on-year), beating the $5.22B consensus, with adjusted EPS of $0.97 versus $0.95 expected. Organic sales growth accelerated to 3.3% from Q4's 2.2%, with companywide volume growth of 1.1% and pricing contribution of 2.2%. North America volume declined 3.2% on trade-down behavior, offset by Asia-Pacific strength. Management maintained the FY26 organic sales growth range of 1–4% and full-year EPS guidance, while trimming gross margin guidance modestly. Stock closed +2.23% at $87.26.
