Both Sleeves Beat

S&P −0.66% to 7,063 on Iran stall, Warsh hawkish tilt, and Apple CEO transition. Dividend +0.03% beats DVY and SPY. Growth Portfolio –0.08% beats IUSG. STLD +5.19% on record steel shipments.

THE SESSION

The session ran the test the morning brief framed. Three discrete catalysts arrived in succession and the broad tape gave back ground: the Iran ceasefire expires tomorrow with Vice President Vance's trip to Islamabad paused after Tehran failed to commit a delegation; Fed chair nominee Kevin Warsh signaled a "different, new inflation framework" in his Senate confirmation hearing, which markets read as an implicit hawkish tilt; and Apple announced Tim Cook will step down September 1, sending the index's largest constituent down 2.5%. The S&P closed –0.66% at 7,063, the Dow gave back 0.59%, the Nasdaq fell 0.61%, and small-caps led losses with the Russell 2000 down 1.00%.

Crude reasserted as the Strait of Hormuz remained closed: WTI rose roughly 5% to $91.79 and Brent climbed back through $95, with Citi warning that prolonged Hormuz disruption could push Brent to $110. Gold reversed sharply, –2.71% to $4,697—a notable move on a risk-off day, reflecting dollar strength and profit-taking after the war-premium run. The VIX rose 7.53% to 20.29, registering the day's headlines without breaking into stress territory. Bitcoin held relatively well at –1.08% to $75,486.

Both IOWN sleeves beat their benchmarks against the red tape. Dividend Strategy added 0.03%, beating both DVY (–0.44%) and SPY (–0.69%). Growth Portfolio finished at –0.08%, beating IUSG (–0.71%) by 63 basis points. The outperformance was concentrated rather than broad: STLD's 5.19% advance on record Q1 steel shipments anchored the dividend sleeve, while AMD, FTNT, and HRMY led the Growth side. Energy holdings firmed on the crude bid—VLO +3.14%, CVX +1.49%—while gold-miner exposure (GFI –6.58%, AEM –6.15%) and crypto-exchange holdings (COIN –7.41%, HOOD –5.31%) accounted for the bulk of growth-side drag.

IOWN Tactical: The morning brief framed today as a test of whether the post-March-30 recovery could absorb a stalled ceasefire, a hawkish Fed nominee, and an unexpected Apple succession. The broad index pulled back; the IOWN sleeves did not. Owning quality through a noisy session is the work.

IOWN HOLDINGS: NOTABLE MOVERS

WINNERS

HRMY +8.84% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Harmony Biosciences led the entire portfolio in the absence of a discrete catalyst, with the move reflecting positioning into the late-stage pipeline (ZYN-002 Phase 3 in Fragile X, pitolisant in Prader-Willi) and continued WAKIX revenue strength. Management reiterated 2026 net product revenue guidance of $1.0–1.04B last week. Close $32.14.

STLD +5.19% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Steel Dynamics rallied on Q1 results delivered after Monday's close: $403M net income, $2.78 diluted EPS, $5.2B revenue, and record steel shipments of 3.6 million tons. Operating income rose 73% sequentially on $86 per ton higher realized pricing. The morning earnings call detailed continued aluminum-rolled ramp and a 6% dividend increase. Close $220.21.

DGX +4.45% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Quest Diagnostics moved higher on its Q1 2026 earnings transcript release, with management commentary on volume trends, advanced diagnostics adoption, and 2026 guidance reaffirmation. The print extends DGX's defensive-quality bid in a session where healthcare names were mixed. Close $205.04.

AMD +3.47% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

AMD rose on a Wells Fargo note flagging tech as "still compelling" with AMD highlighted alongside one other name as a buy, and on continuing AI infrastructure momentum that has lifted the semiconductor complex through April. Close $284.49.

ATAT +3.25% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Atour Lifestyle held onto recent strength tied to China consumer travel data and continued retail-segment growth. The move was sector-neutral with no specific catalyst. Close $38.46.

FTNT +3.22% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Fortinet won the 2026 Google Cloud Partner of the Year award for Workload Security, reinforcing the cybersecurity sleeve's positioning in cloud-adjacent enterprise spending. Close $85.26.

VLO +3.14% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Valero rebounded as the Strait of Hormuz remained closed and crude rebid 5%, with refined-product crack spreads firming. The move recoups portion of Friday's 7%+ peace-trade decline. Close $233.39.

GPC +2.14% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Genuine Parts Company gained on the Q1 2026 earnings call summary release, with management commentary on automotive aftermarket demand and industrial-segment performance. Close $115.00.

DECLINERS

COIN –7.41% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Coinbase fell sharply on competitive encroachment from prediction-market platforms: The Information reported Kalshi will launch CFTC-regulated crypto perpetual futures, and Polymarket separately announced its own perpetual-futures product covering crypto and stocks. Both moves target Coinbase's derivatives revenue stream. Close $195.95.

GFI –6.58% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Gold Fields fell with gold itself, which dropped 2.71% to $4,697. The metal's sharp pullback came on dollar strength and profit-taking after the war-premium run; gold miners typically amplify the underlying move. Close $45.57.

AEM –6.15% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Agnico Eagle followed gold lower on the same dynamic that hit GFI. The miner sleeve has unwound a meaningful portion of its 2026 outperformance over the past two sessions. Close $203.09.

HOOD –5.31% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Robinhood declined on the same Kalshi/Polymarket news that hit Coinbase, with HOOD additionally exposed via its prediction-markets partnership and crypto trading revenue. Close $86.43.

PDD –5.00% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

PDD Holdings declined alongside broad China-tech weakness as US-China trade tensions remained in focus and ADR sentiment softened on the day. Close $98.99.

MATX –3.59% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Matson gave back recent gains as Pacific shipping rate data softened and the Hormuz situation kept ocean-freight forward indicators choppy. Close $170.68.

CHD –3.46% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Church & Dwight fell on continued consumer-staples rotation as defensive bid rotated toward energy and select healthcare. Close $93.21.

MARA –3.44% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Marathon Digital declined with crypto miners broadly as Bitcoin slipped 1.08% and the prediction-market news pressured the entire crypto-adjacent complex. Close $11.23.

ABT –3.42% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Abbott Laboratories declined as healthcare large-caps saw modest selling pressure ahead of upcoming sector earnings. No company-specific catalyst. Close $92.72.

SYK –3.26% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Stryker continued to consolidate after recent strength, with med-device names lagging on the day. No company-specific catalyst. Close $327.30.

HUT –3.05% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Hut 8 declined as Bitcoin slipped and the crypto-mining complex faced pressure. The leveraged BTC exposure that drove yesterday's 5.46% gain reversed today. Close $76.58.

BKH –2.76% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Black Hills declined alongside the broader utilities sleeve on the perception that Warsh's implied hawkish tilt could pressure rate-sensitive names. Close $73.51.

HOLDINGS NEWS

SYF reported Q1 ahead of the open and the print was a clear beat that the stock didn't reward. Synchrony posted $2.27 diluted EPS versus the $2.14 estimate, $805 million net income (up 6.3% year-over-year), record first-quarter purchase volume of $43 billion, and credit performance that came in stronger than expected. The Board approved a new $6.5 billion open-ended share repurchase program and a planned 13% dividend increase to $0.34 per share starting Q3 2026. The CET1 capital ratio stood at 12.7%. Despite the operational beat and the capital return announcement, the stock closed –1.21% at $77.63—a typical post-print profit-taking response after the recent run-up into the print.

STLD's Q1 print delivered the operational story the morning brief flagged. Steel Dynamics reported $403M net income on $5.2B revenue with record steel shipments of 3.6 million tons. The headline EPS of $2.78 was a $0.06 miss versus the Zacks consensus of $2.84, but the operational metrics—73% sequential operating income growth, $86 per ton higher realized pricing, and continued aluminum-rolled qualification progress—were unambiguously strong. The 6% dividend increase and the 5.19% stock response confirm the market valued the volume and pricing trajectory over the headline EPS print.
