

Rotation, Not Retreat

S&P +0.41%, Dow +1.73% near a record, Russell 2000 +1.59%. Nasdaq -0.07% as Broadcom's slide pulled chips lower. Eight of eleven sectors green; oil -3% on de-escalation hopes.

THE SESSION

The chip selloff the morning set in motion arrived on schedule — and the broader market simply rotated around it. Broadcom fell roughly 13% after a Q2 beat that nonetheless left the Street wanting: management held rather than raised its $100B annual AI-chip target and signaled a pivot to selling chips alone rather than integrated systems. That was enough to reset a name priced for perfection, and the de-rating spread across the semiconductor complex.

It did not, however, spread to the tape. The S&P 500 added 0.41% to 7,584, the Dow climbed 1.73% — nearly 875 points to 51,561, just shy of its record — and the Russell 2000 rose 1.59%. The Nasdaq, down 0.07%, was the lone index in the red. Eight of eleven sectors advanced, led by Health Care (+3.14%), Financials (+2.67%), and Real Estate (+1.87%). The VIX fell 5.42% to 15.19, a reading that frames the day as orderly rotation rather than stress.

Crude reversed Wednesday's war-premium spike, falling roughly 3% toward $93 as the U.S. reported an Israel-Lebanon ceasefire framework and President Trump pointed to possible progress with Iran this weekend. Gold held firm at $4,506 (+0.87%). On the data front, the revised first-quarter productivity reading was marked down to 0.3% from the 0.8% preliminary print — a modest cooling signal that sets up Friday's May employment report as the week's binding catalyst. Bitcoin slid about 4% to $63,231.

IOWN Tactical: A single name's valuation reset is not a verdict on the market. When breadth carries the tape while the most-crowded trade cools, ownership of the whole business — not the one headline — is what compounds. Avoid Erosion.

IOWN HOLDINGS: NOTABLE MOVERS

WINNERS

HOOD +6.61% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Robinhood led the financials rotation as the platform opened retail indications of interest for the SpaceX IPO, now expected on or around June 12 at an initial $135 per share.

MRVL +4.90% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Marvell rebounded as the connectivity-demand thesis held even amid the Broadcom-led semi de-rating; the supplier-side AI story remains structurally intact.

ABT +4.36% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Abbott paced a Health Care sector that led all eleven groups at +3.14% — the defensive complex doing exactly its job on a tech-down day.

PCAR +3.22% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

PACCAR caught the cyclical and small-cap participation that lifted the Dow and Russell, with industrials broadly green.

SYF +3.00% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Synchrony rode the Financials advance (+2.67%) as money rotated out of crowded semis and into rate- and credit-sensitive names.

AEM +2.97% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Agnico Eagle tracked gold's firm $4,506 close (+0.87%), with the metal holding its bid even as oil and crypto sold off.

OKE +2.54% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

ONEOK firmed despite crude's 3% pullback, its fee-based midstream cash flows insulated from the day's spot-price move.

DECLINERS

AMD -3.56% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Caught in the Broadcom-led profit-taking across AI silicon with no company-specific news; the move was a sector de-rating, not a fundamental shift.

QCOM -2.98% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Qualcomm fell with the broader chip complex as the Broadcom guide put AI-chip multiples on watch.

HUT -2.69% GROWTH PORTFOLIO

Hut 8 tracked Bitcoin's 4% slide toward $63K as the digital-asset complex extended its recent softness.

LRCX -2.12% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Lam Research was swept into the semicap selloff even as Mizuho lifted its price target — a divergence worth noting.

ADI -2.04% DIVIDEND STRATEGY

Analog Devices gave back part of its strong week as Broadcom's slide reset AI-chip valuation expectations.

IBIT -2.65% DIGITAL ASSET ETF

The iShares Bitcoin ETF declined with spot Bitcoin's move toward $63K; ETHA fell 1.40% alongside it.

HOLDINGS NEWS

Coinbase (Growth Portfolio) closed the first Bitcoin-backed Fannie Mae mortgage in partnership with Better, tying Bitcoin collateral to conforming home loans — an incremental step in pulling the asset into mainstream credit infrastructure. COIN finished +0.56%.

Edison International (Growth Portfolio) detailed more than $650 million offered as Southern California Edison continues relief for community members affected by the Eaton Fire, advancing the utility’s remediation framework. EIX rose 1.34%.

Lam Research (Dividend Strategy) drew a price-target increase from Mizuho, a constructive analyst signal that stood in contrast to the stock’s sympathy decline within the day’s broad semicap pullback.

PORTFOLIO PERFORMANCE

The Dividend Strategy added 0.51%, beating SPY (+0.39%) while trailing the dividend-tilted DVY (+0.81%), which captured the day’s defensive and rate-sensitive leadership. The Growth Portfolio rose 0.77% and beat IUSG (-0.05%) cleanly, as the sleeve’s financials and miners outweighed its semiconductor drag. Year-to-date, both strategies remain comfortably ahead of their benchmarks — Dividend +15.45% versus DVY +9.76% and SPY +11.03%, and Growth +21.34% versus IUSG +13.90%.
