THE SESSION

Stocks extended their advance on Tuesday as nuclear power producers rallied and Treasury yields eased.

The S&P 500 rose 0.59% to 7,820, its first close above 7,800 per CNBC, while the Nasdaq gained 0.45% to 27,600 and the Dow 0.49% to 51,521; the VIX slipped to 15.0. Google and Constellation Energy announced a 20-year agreement for 890 megawatts of new nuclear capacity from uprates at 11 Constellation reactors in Illinois, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, alongside a 15-year agreement for 2,700 megawatts from the existing fleet, per Constellation; Talen Energy rose 12.43% and the utilities sector fund XLU 2.98%. Marvell rose 5.81% after setting a fiscal 2031 revenue target of $70 billion to $90 billion at its investor day, while chip-equipment makers eased, with KLA down 4.54% and Applied Materials 2.21%. The 10-year Treasury yield eased to 5.27% from Monday's 5.31%, per Treasury data, ahead of Wednesday's release of the Federal Reserve's September meeting minutes. Brent dipped below $98 a barrel early, following last Friday's Group of Seven agreement to release 100 million barrels from emergency reserves over four months, before recovering to about $101.

The Dividend Strategy gained 0.83%, ahead of DVY's 0.54% by 0.29 point and of SPY's 0.55% by 0.28 point, with seventeen of twenty-five holdings higher. Constellation Energy was the largest contributor by a wide margin, rising 12.25% to $300.40 and adding about 0.79 point of the sleeve's 0.83 on the Google agreement, which Constellation says involves more than $4.3 billion of new investment. NextEra Energy added 2.10% and S&P Global 1.33%. Stryker was the largest drag, falling 2.36% to $278.50 and subtracting about 0.12 point on the day it announced that President and Chief Operating Officer Spencer Stiles will succeed Kevin Lobo as chief executive on January 1, 2027, with Lobo becoming Executive Chair. Lam Research fell 3.44% to $333.89 as equipment makers eased, and Abbott declined 1.93%; no company-specific news identified for either.

The Growth Portfolio gained 1.42% while IUSG rose 0.58%, ahead by 0.84 point, with eighteen of twenty-five holdings higher. Vistra was the largest contributor, rising 10.77% to $160.50 and adding about 0.57 point as nuclear generators rallied on the Google–Constellation agreement, per 24/7 Wall St, a day after the Department of Energy announced a conditional loan commitment of up to $4.2 billion for the company's nuclear uprates. Marvell added 5.81% to $287.01 and about 0.25 point after projecting fiscal 2031 revenue of $70 billion to $90 billion at its investor day in New York, while Credo gained 3.93% and Fortinet 3.88%. Robinhood was the largest drag, falling 1.85% to $112.00 and subtracting about 0.10 point; no company-specific news identified. Among the digital-asset ETFs, IBIT slipped 0.14% and ETHA 0.65%. On the year, the Dividend Strategy stands at +18.34% against DVY's +11.67%, a +6.67-point spread, with SPY at +15.14%; the Growth Portfolio stands at +25.94% against IUSG's +18.99%, a +6.95-point spread.
